

The project consists of five major chapters. The first chapter discusses about the; background of the study- an overview of what is ecotourism and how it has been discussed by different scholars from the international level to the local level and a brief history. The second subsection is the problem statement which will talk about the gaps that exists. The purpose for the study is also discussed in this chapter and it's to find out the effects of ecotourism on sustainable tourism development. The objectives for this research are; to find out how environmental conservation, community development and cultural preservation influences development of sustainable tourism. Discussion on chapter two will be on theoretical review of literature i.e., what other authors have said about ecotourism and sustainable tourism development. It will also show the gap summary i.e., what is it that the researcher will do and have not been done earlier. The conceptual framework shows how the objectives of the research have been put into place. Chapter three will be discussing on the research design which was used in data collection, the population of the target group, the population frame, the sampling procedures, data collection instrument and data analysis. Chapter four is all about the presentation of findings from the area of study and finally chapter five discusses the summary of major findings in accordance to the research questions. It shows whether the research objectives were met. It also gives the researcher's recommendations on what the researcher thinks should be done to solve the problem or to ensure sustainable tourism development in the region. The chapter also gives the suggestions for further studies.
